Record all your channels and agent screens in one place, while satisfying your contact center compliance needs. We make it easy to mitigate risk and meet GDPR, PCI and HIPAA standards with encryption, automated and on-demand masking, consent-based recording, extensive retention options, and key management. With centralized admin in the unified, all-in-one platform, it's easy to set up and manage recording policies and use recordings for quality, coaching and analytics activities. You can also find, playback, and extract interactions from an intuitive interface. This module covers the Call Recording functionality in 3CX. This includes the different options as well as the location of the recordings, sizing and quota. In more detail: Enabling/Disabling Recordings (Admin) The best call recorder software makes it simple and easy to record, manage and store calls on your smartphone. Call recording can be a useful and even essential for recording an interview, keeping records of your communications, or just keeping logs of your phone calls for admin purposes. While the basic premise of a call recorder is simple, many of these apps differ when it comes to ease of use, playback, and more. In addition, you'll need to decide whether you're willing to pay for a call recorder or whether you want free software with potentially fewer features. Keep in mind that the laws around call recording vary between states and countries. If you're planning to record a call, it's always good practice to ask the person you're talking to first. With that, let's take a look at the five best call recorder software options you can start using today. You may also like to check out our featured best business smartphones. The best call recorder software of 2022 in full. (Image credit: Google Play) For Android users, there are few free options better than ACR Call Recorder. This simple app features an on/off toggle switch that enables you to automatically record every call that takes place on your phone. One of the best things about it is that it's intuitive. You can search for recordings by contact names and easily share recordings right from the app. It also comes with an auto-delete option so that your phone's storage doesn't fill up with old recordings. The only downside is that if you leave automatic recording off and want to manually start recording for a specific call, you'll need to upgrade to the paid version. (Image credit: Google Play) Many call recording apps only work if your call takes place through your phone's built-in dialing app, not if you use a voice over IP (VoIP) app. But Cube Call Recorder is capable of recording calls through Skype, Facebook, WhatsApp, Slack, and more on Android devices. The free version of this app comes with ads, but it offers most of the essential recording features that users need. You can choose to record every call or list specific contacts for recording your conversations. Starting a manual recording mid-call is free, too. The premium version adds automatic backup, file security, and automatic deletion. For backup, your recordings are synced to Google Drive as soon as your call ends. (Image credit: Google Play) Blackbox Call Recorder bills itself as reliable recorder software made for professionals. It requires a small monthly subscription, but, it brings a number of advanced features together in one place that you won't find elsewhere. For example, you can lock Blackbox to prevent unauthorized access with a password or pin. You can also set up your own file directory to better organize your files, and sort recordings by date, time, or duration. The app also provides you with an on-screen widget that you can use to start or stop recording calls manually. The biggest downside to this platform is that it doesn't work with VoIP calls. So, if you frequently talk over WhatsApp, Skype, or another app, Blackbox Call Recorder won't be able to capture those conversations. (Image credit: Apple App Store) Just Press Record is easily the best call recorder software for iPhones if you're willing to pay a small fee. Part of what makes this app great, especially for Apple fans, is that it's available for iPad and the Apple Watch as well. You can record from your device's microphone or from AirPods. This recorder also features automatic transcription in over 30 languages. You can edit transcripts in a notepad-like tool within the app to get your recordings just right. All of the text is searchable within the app, too. What's more, Just Press Record supports audio editing. You can view the waveform of your audio file and cut out parts you don't need to save space on your device. (Image credit: Apple App Store) Rev Call Recorder is completely free call recorder software for iPhones. There are no limits or in-app ads, but keep in mind you can only register for this app if you have a US phone number. The app is somewhat simple, but gets the basic features right. It records high-quality audio and you can share the files via email, text, or cloud app. That said, you can't record VoIP calls with Rev, and the app won't automatically backup your recordings to the cloud for safekeeping. There's also no way to set the app to automatically record all incoming and outgoing calls. We've featured the best business phone systems. To test for the best call recorder software we searched for a range of popular options as well as took recommendations from people we know who use call recording software regularly. We then tried each platform to see how user-friendly each was, as well as determine what range of tools and advanced options were available. Pricing also came into account when determining our best list. See how we test, rate, and review products on TechRadar. When deciding which of the best call recorder software apps to use, first consider what actual needs you have. For example, someone simply wanting to use one on a casual basis may find a free or cheap option is the most cost-effective while providing all of the necessary tools that would be required. However, if you're planning to use call recording for professional or business purposes, especially with a large number of people and on a regular basis, then you will probably want to look to the higher-end options for the more advanced tools that are included. project management software. In 1997, Porter's Call founder/executive director Al Andrews moved from Colorado to Nashville to become a counselor at a private practice in Nashville. After a couple of years as a counselor in Nashville, he realized that 90% of his patients worked in music and that their needs were unlike the rest of his clientele. "They were different, not because they have different problems than most people, but I've never met an artist who can come regularly on a Tuesday at 9 a.m.," Andrews tells Billboard. "And at the beginning of an artist's career, maybe they cannot afford the going rates." Andrews decided to meet with record labels to see if any would be willing to purchase a day of counseling sessions for their artist roster. The first person he visited was Peter York, then president of EMI Christian Music Group (now Capitol CMG). "I said, 'Labels spend so much money investing in artists' careers to get them out there and successful, but we all watch artists crash and burn all the time, for different reasons,'" Andrews recalls. The label's philanthropic The Sparrow Foundation offered Andrews a generous grant to launch a pilot program, but with one stipulation—that he be willing to see any artist from any label. "Usually, labels don't help other labels, but he and his team wanted to open it up to all the competing labels' artists. I asked him why, and he said, 'We think this is something the whole industry needs.'" After three months of meeting with artists, York and Bill Hearn (then EMI Christian Music Group's CEO) encouraged Andrews to launch Porter's Call, which offers free counseling and mental health support to both signed and unsigned recording artists (as well as their significant others). Porter's Call officially launched in 2001 just outside of Nashville in Franklin, Tennessee, and over 20 years later, Andrews says the organization has helped more than 3,000 recording artists. Tonight (Aug. 30), Porter's Call will celebrate its 13th annual Evening of Stories event at the newly opened Fisher Center for the Performing Arts at Nashville's Belmont University. Kelsea Ballerini, "I Hear a Symphony" singer Cody Fry, "Sunday Sermons" hitmaker Anne Wilson and country trio Lady A's Hillary Scott will appear. Also featured will be British sailor Tracy Edwards, MBE, who gained acclaim as the skipper of the first all-female crew to sail around the world in the Whitbread Round the World Yacht Race, as well as People's Choice Award winner (for favorite viral video star in 2011) and author Carlos Whittaker. "Porter's Call has been a true pillar for my mental health and personal growth over the last few years, and I am beyond honored to honor the incredible work they do during this year's event," Ballerini tells Billboard via a statement. "I've learned that through vulnerability in our storytelling, true connection happens, and I'm so looking forward to sharing more of mine." The Evening of Stories events launched in 2009, welcoming approximately 150 attendees. Since then, artists including Amy Grant, Vince Gill, Thomas Rhett and Holly Williams have shared their stories and songs to support Porter's Call. Andrews expects approximately 500 attendees at tonight's event. Andrews estimates that 90 percent of the funds raised from the event are raised before the event happens, via sponsorships. "When you come to Evening of Stories, we don't have the awkward checkbook moment," Andrews says. "It's really a celebration and thank you to donors and supporters. The artists take part in Evening of Stories willingly and so many say that Porter's Call has been part of their career and they want to give back and share about their experience." Throughout the year, the remainder of Porter's Call's operating funds come from donations from an array of record labels, publishers, managers and often, artists themselves who want to give back. Importantly, relying on donations also allows the organization to offer its services to artists free of charge. Andrews estimates the organization has collectively saved artists over $6 million from not having to pay the going counseling rates. "We never ask artists for money for our services, though often on their own, we've seen them turn around and give back in various ways," Andrews says. Porter's Call takes its name from Benedictine monasteries in the fifth century, when a porter opened the monastery doors to sojourners, aiding them with food or counsel. "We wanted people to knock on our door so we can help them find the way to what they need," Andrews says. Artists make use of the service as needed, with some going to sessions over many years, while others use the service for a more limited time. For artists struggling with addiction, Porter's Call acts as a referral resource if needed. When artists are off the road or in Nashville between tour dates, they can have in-person sessions, while on the road they can set up phone or Zoom sessions. Porter's Call has grown to five staffers, including Andrews, an office manager and three porters, though Andrews says they are looking at adding more porters, in response to the ongoing impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on artists. "As we look around the counseling community and our city, the need has been so great with all of the issues that COVID brought, such as artists not touring for over a year," Andrews says. "Also, people are also much more open about needing help. We are trying to be as creative as we can in meeting those needs, such as [starting] smaller groups of artist peer relationships." Andrews has fielded requests from people in New York City, Los Angeles and Florida to expand Porter's Call to other areas, though he says it is Nashville's supportive, community-driven feel that has made Porter's Call unique. "It's not quite a franchiseable thing at the moment," he says. "In Nashville, people came together to support it and it continued to grow. But I have told people if they want to start a similar program, we are glad to talk them through it or offer ideas. But even the fact that it is no cost to artists is unique. It takes a community of people to invest and work together to make something like this happen."
